INTEGRATED INTERDISCIPLINARY CURRICULUM

The foundation of the Capital Scholars Honors Program's four-year experience is a core of integrated classes in social sciences and humanities, biological and physical sciences, and other areas taught by interdisciplinary teams of faculty. The core courses are integrated from semester to semester, and from subject to subject. Taken together, the core curriculum provides a broad educational foundation for your major and for life after college.

TEAM TEACHING

Most courses in the core curriculum are taught by a team of professors. This allows you to see how different faculty members' personal and disciplinary perspectives influence their thinking and to discover which teaching styles best fit the way you learn. Most courses serve about 100 students and are taught by four or five faculty members. Students are often divided into small groups for discussion and individual assistance; in other sessions, all students and faculty meet together. Overall, there is one faculty member for every 20 students.

SKILLS ACROSS THE CURRICULUM

The basic intellectual skills of reading and listening, mathematical computation, computer use, obtaining information from libraries and electronic sources, and critical thinking, writing, and speaking are integrated into all courses.

MULTICULTURALISM ACROSS THE CURRICULUM

Each course includes topics and draws on authors that reflect the ethnic, racial, and gender diversity of America, and also the broader cultural diversity that exists in the world. Each course furthers the CAP objective by expanding your knowledge of and appreciation for the contributions of women, Americans of color, and other cultures with whom we share the world.

A FOCUS ON LEADERSHIP

Effective leaders learn their leadership skills, usually through trial and error. While not denying the experiential basis of good leadership, CAP's philosophy is that preparation for leadership should not be hit or miss, but should be a component of higher education for highly qualified students. CAP courses incorporate the study of leadership and the curriculum-wide focus on collaborative learning emphasizes leadership as an integral aspect of collaboration.

INTERNSHIPS

UIS undergraduates can participate in a variety of for-credit experiential learning opportunities through the Applied Study and Experiential Learning Term (AST) Program including internships, guided research and creative projects, and study and travel abroad. These can be tailored to your own interests and geographic requirements. Nearly 400 potential internship placements are available and 70% of all the internships are paid. The opportunities range from accounting to working at a zoo and include working in the private sector, state and federal governmental agencies, non-profit organizations and international agencies or businesses.

SERVICE-LEARNING

Service-Learning is an opportunity for students to provide community service to non-profit agencies while exploring the connections of academic theory and practical community needs. Service-Learning courses can be taken to fulfill Engaged Citizenship Common Experience (ECCE) requirements, either ECCE Engagement or ECCE Elective requirement. Make a difference while here at UIS!

INTERNATIONAL STUDY

International study is an important and exciting part of the education of an increasing number of American college students. If you come to the Capital Scholars Honors Program, we will not only encourage you to study abroad, but we will do everything we can to make it simple and affordable. We have direct exchange student relationships with universities in England, Japan, Australia and Mexico, and CAP Honors students also have access to placements in programs world wide.

ADMISSIONS REQUIREMENTS

Admission is open to high school graduates who have demonstrated high academic achievement and potential for creativity and leadership. Students admitted to the program are expected to have excellent written and oral communication skills and an interest in a challenging, intellectual college experience.
