Michael Vorenberg

Michael Vorenberg is associate professor of History at Brown University. He received his A.B. and Ph.D. (1995) from Harvard University. He was a postdoctoral fellow at the W.E.B. Du Bois Institute at Harvard, and then an assistant professor of History at the State University of New York at Buffalo. He began teaching at Brown University in 1999. His first book, Final Freedom: The Civil War, the Abolition of Slavery, and the Thirteenth Amendment was published by Cambridge University Press in 2001 and was a Finalist for the Lincoln Prize. He is also the author of The Emancipation Proclamation: A Brief History with Documents (Bedford Books, 2010). He has authored more than a dozen articles and essays on topics ranging from constitutional history to slave reparations to Abraham Lincoln. Currently, he is at work on two books, one about the end of the American Civil War, and the other about the impact of the Civil War on American citizenship. At Brown University, he has received awards for teaching and for undergraduate advising. He also served on the university's Steering Committee on Slavery and Justice, an endeavor that received national attention and led to similar endeavors on many other university campuses. He resides in Rhode Island, which was the second state to ratify the Thirteenth Amendment abolishing slavery (Illinois was the first!).
