5 Ways You Can Use...

Camtasia Relay

1. Use Camtasia Relay to record “How-to” presentations for navigating through computer programs or useful websites you wish to share with your students or colleagues.

2. Record and capture your lectures to share online with students for online courses, or if you are sick and unable to hold class.

   If you teach an online course, have students use Camtasia Relay to narrate and capture their presentations. They will be able to present and share their projects with the class.

3. Record web-conferences or web-meetings to utilize for future reference.

   Provide individual feedback to students by going through their papers and projects and making comments, then sharing the screencast with them so they can review your critiques.

More Ideas for Using Camtasia Relay...

- Record a narrated journey through the web.
- By recording lectures on a consistent basis, students who have been absent from class will be able to view lectures and keep up with class material.
- Recorded lectures provide students with the chance to go back and review important parts of lecture.
- Camtasia Relay is a tool highly valued for its ability to facilitate communication, particularly in higher education. Share supplemental lectures and materials for students to view on their own time to stay in touch outside of class.
