The University of Illinois Springfield has named Jamie Krueger as its Assistant Athletic Director for Compliance, UIS Athletic Director Dr. Rodger Jehlicka announced Monday.

Krueger also will be the athletic department's SWA, which stands for Senior Woman Administrator.

She takes over for Alison Fitzgerald, who resigned this past spring in order to take a similar position at Barry University in Florida.

Krueger comes to UIS from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, an NCAA Division II institution in Odessa, Texas, where she was the NCAA Compliance Coordinator for the past year.

Among her duties in that position, Krueger was responsible for certifying eligibility for incoming and continuing studentathletes; administrating and monitoring the athletics financial aid process; monitoring the school's 11 intercollegiate sport programs to ensure compliance with NCAA, Heartland Conference and institutional policies and procedures regarding recurring playing seasons, financial aid, benefits, amateurism and eligibility and providing rules training for departmental staff through compliance meetings and monthly newsletters.

Prior to joining the UTPB Falcons, Krueger spent a year as the intern for compliance in the athletic department at Drake University.

She earned a Law Degree from Drake in 2009 after graduating from Wisconsin River Falls, where she was a member of the women's basketball team.
